Speculation on 1943 Election Rife in Ottawa

By FRANK FLAHERTY

OTTAWA, Feb. 15.—(CP)—Speculation over the prospect of a general election in 1943 is rife among members of parliament. It received a vigorous lift during the past week by an exchange in the house between Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative house leader. It led Mr. J. Colwell, C.C.F. leader, to ask Mr. King if parliament will be dissolved at the end of the present session after Mr. King used the word "dissolved."

Mr. King answered that Mr. Colwell will find "out" soon. "The fact Mr. King declined an immediate answer gave impetus to their speculation. If Mr. King was careful in his answer, Mr. Graydon was equally careful in dealing with one direct question to him by the Prime Minister. Mr. King asked when the Progressive Conservative national leader, John Bracken, intends to seek seat in parliament.

PARIES QUESTION
Mr. Graydon parried the question by asking if there was an invitation to Mr. Bracken to run against Mr. King in the Prime Minister's own constituency of Prince Albert, N. Saskatchewan.

The next day Mr. Graydon called for a conference with Mr. Bracken. The Progressive Conservative members in the house, without dropping and hint of his leader's intentions about seeking a seat.

The evening, my brother and I were helping to carry stuff out of a burning blacksmith shop. This building was right next to the livery barn in which the dynamite was stored. Then we were told to get away from the dynamite store. There was a great rush of air that seemed to press us down. Then the air just seemed to whirl all around.

"A huge coil of copper wire snail through the air and hit the ground right near us. I pulled my brother in and we ran the railway cars in case more came down."

"I was facing the fire when the explosion came and in one second I saw about 200 people in the light of the fire. When the fire was just over the blast there was no light to be seen."

"I exclaimed, 'My God! Look at that.' Those people have a right to be scared but a lot of them were knocked down," Lomas explained.

WALKED TO TOWN
After the explosion, he continued, "we walked back to the centre of the town to help out with the injured. For a moment or two after the blast there was no light to be seen at all. But it was just as if a million lights were scattered the fire in all directions, and soon nearly every building within a square block was ablaze."

AFTER EXPLOSION
"Buildings I know were completely destroyed," Lomas said. Dawson Creek hotel. It is a three-story building. Then there was the restaurant and postoffice. The biggest blaze was the lumber yard. After the explosion you could see anything where the livery stable had been, or the blacksmith shop either."

"You could see the fire blazing on the roofs of all buildings. The town was filled with blazing fires. It was terrible."

HELPED INJURED
"We helped pick up the injured. The soldiers seemed to be the worst hurt. I helped pick up a soldier with a hole in his head and his face was badly torn. We loaded about eight into a military ambulance. Then we were told there was a plane crashed in the burning lumber yard, so we all started moving out of the danger zone. We went up on top of the first overlooking the town and saw the fire in all directions brought under control, in about three hours."

"Lack of water was chiefly responsible for the explosion, Lomas said.

"Had the army fire fighters plenty of water the first fire would have been put out in a couple of minutes, long before it spread to the other buildings. The water all had to be brought about five miles in tanks."

WATER BY TRAIN
An N.R. locomotive moved into the fire zone to relieve the water situation. An army machine wagon placed a hose in the engine tender, and fought the flames successfully in this manner.

GREAT COURAGE
"But the soldiers displayed great courage. They knew about the dynamite but that never stopped them. They moved their tanks right beside the blazing buildings. I saw one fire engine with the whole end blown off it, but the operator stayed right on the job. The tank wagon also stayed in. I fear the soldier running the tank wagon was hurt because there was a different man on it after the explosion. I think that all of the men fighting the fire from the roof like, I was about two blocks away from the exploding dynamite and was hurried through the air fully 100 feet. I landed under a box car in the railway yards. I was dazed but wasn't knocked out," Wilson said.

"I crawled out," he continued, and tried to help in the work of picking up the badly injured. Then my leg gave out on me. It seems to be sort of paralyzed."

The main trouble about fighting the huge fire that followed the explosion seemed to be the fact the main water supply is 10 miles away. I didn't know a thing about the dynamite. But when building it was stored in caught fire, the dynamite burned for a while before exploding. It burned with a blue flame."

BLAZING OFF ROOF
"There were six persons on a nearby building fighting the fire when the explosion occurred. I saw the baby fly out of the woman's arms and she fell back on the ground. I was knocked down and myself, so I don't know what happened after the explosion of her baby."

Wayne Summerville said he saw a woman with a baby in her arms standing close to the blazing blacksmith shop.

"When the explosion occurred, I saw the baby fly out of the woman's arms and she fell back on the ground. I was knocked down and myself, so I don't know what happened after the explosion of her baby."

Armand Gunderson had been watching the fire for a few minutes and had walked into the co-operatives store to get some goods.

WAS FRUSTRATED
"I had just asked the storekeeper for the cigars when the dynamite exploded. Some thing came through the roof, and hit me on the head. I don't know what it was. I was dazed but recovered and looked outside. I never saw such a sight in my life. It was actually on fire, everywhere."

War News Summary

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 15
Russia: The Red army, waging the greatest offensive ever conducted by Russian arms, hammered new lines in its chain about Kharkov today after capturing Rostov on the Don in a bloody struggle.

A mid-day Soviet communiqué recorded by the Soviet Monitor in London said the Russian forces had made new advances in the Zolochiv area, where the big Ukrainian city was threatened from the northwest and the big Chupiyev area, where the banners of the Red army already were only a few miles short of the city's boundaries.

North Africa: Heavy fighting broke out on the Tunisian front with the Germans attacking. Everywhere in Tunisia, the Axis had launched strong attacks west of Faid Pass, 40 miles inland from the Tunisian east coast.

Air War: Germany and Italy were pounced last night by the R.A.F., which hit the Rhinefront city of Cologne, scene of the first 100-bomber raid, and the arsenal city of Milan in northern Italy. The R.A.F. sent a strong force with the R.A.F. to Cologne.

Allied forces raided Crete, Sicily and southern Italy, following up large-scale blows Saturday on Naples and Salerno on Tunis, Bizerte and Crotone in Sicily by other bombing formations.

Pacific Area: Allied bombers attacked Japan today, dropping incendiary bombs, and returning pilot smoke from fires so dense that darkness could not be observed.

An American communiqué says that six thousand Japs have been killed in the final fighting on Guadalcanal. Allied losses were light.

Parity Prices

The convention of the Alberta Farmers' Union held at Lethbridge on the agricultural problem when it demands parity prices on farm products, is an elementary axiom of business that selling prices must bear a very definite relation to costs. If costs run higher than selling prices, the manufacturer suffers a loss. Therefore, all selling prices must be based on costs.

This principle is recognized in every war industry except agriculture. War contracts are awarded on the basis of cost plus a profit. The manufacturer is allowed his cost of manufacture plus a specified profit. His selling prices are governed entirely by the fluctuations of costs.

"Parity prices" in agriculture are exactly the same as "cost plus" manufacturing in other war industries. This simply means that the farmer's selling price should bear a constant relationship to the costs of farm production, so that the farmer, at least, should be able to secure a fixed profit and ensure against operating at a loss.

This is the only fair and equitable means of controlling prices. Any fixed price for farm products that does not accommodate itself to farm costs is not only clumsy, but completely ineffective.

Travel Made Easier

A Canadian who wishes to visit the United States will not hereafter require to obtain a passport. Instead, he can secure from a United States consul in Canada an identification card which will entitle him to cross the border. The card must be endorsed by a Canadian immigration official to enable the holder to re-enter Canada. Any number of trips may be made in the course of a year without obtaining new cards, but no stay in the United States may be longer than 29 days.

With military duties, employment restrictions, exchange difficulties, and the general pre-occupation in war or other essential work, this simplifying of the procedure is not likely to precipitate any mass exodus of Canadian tourists southward. But the convenience will be appreciated by older people and others who have a genuine health desire to pay a late winter visit to warmer latitudes, by those whose business affairs may require them to cross the line, and by those living in border communities in Canada who want to work in the United States.

Whatever reasons existed for enforcing the passport law just among Canadians have apparently ceased to be important. The result, it may be supposed, of the pooling of war efforts and the establishing in border communities of wartime regulations and restraints.

Dump and Run

The few Nazi raiders who still venture to fly across the Channel have adopted a new method to shorten their visits. They have begun to drop bombs on military targets and civilian establishments. To wreck something and go home has been their standing motto. But in their palmy days they were dropping bombs on buildings, and to machine-gun crowds in public streets or at bathing beaches.

They have time now for these day-long tactics. They have no more whizzing around and too many fighter planes drawing beads on them. So the Goerger valiantly and bravely attack the coast buildings they happen to spot and scuttle for Germany. Naturally they choose heavily on department stores, schools, churches and other buildings that stand out on the landscape. One of these days they will no doubt get a hospital or so, though their luck has been poor in that particular line they started the new campaign.

Formerly the strafing was more or less deliberate, not wholly indiscriminate. That, as much as anything could do, indicated how the mighty Luftwaffe has fallen. The first object in the Nazi airman's mind now apparently is to save his neck and his plane. He isn't a coward. The fact behind his hurry must be that trained raiders are getting scarce in Germany, or planes are getting scarce, and the supply must be conserved even while keeping up a well pretence that Britain is still under air attack.

Unity Is the Keynote

If at Berlin or Rome or Tokyo there was any hope that Mr. Churchill had over-estimated the significance of theablanca conference, or had placed an extreme interpretation upon the decisions taken for trial and error, as well as abandoned. President Roosevelt made this the prime Minister said the President repeated the same positive language, as to the solidarity of the Allies, the objective of complete victory to which they are pledged, and their agreement to plan to carry the war to the enemy in this present year even front and with intensifying fury.

moling the enemy is now getting in Russia he must look for in other quarters also. To Japan he presented the information that Japan was to be subjected to attack from China—information which the war lords there well know he would not have given them if the means had not been at hand to make good the promise in spite of what they may do to prevent. Whatever they may have hoped for in the way of compromise, the conspirators know now that on Russia that was written.

After Napoleon won the battle of Berlin and Rome and Tokyo. The Allied war policy has been proclaimed on both sides of the Atlantic, on the authority of the United States and the British Empire, with the approval of the chiefs of Russia and China. So also have the ideals which the Allies intend to embody in world reconstruction when the aggressors have been forced into unconditional surrender. Those ideals are set forth in the Atlantic Charter. The Hitlers and the Mussolinis and the Tojos have got, and go for good and all, along with the Quislings and the Lavalis of all races and colors. To which end the United Nations must be united.

When the constitution of the new world order comes to be written.

Unity is and will be the keynote of Allied policy alike for war and peace.

A member of the House of Commons wants to know if any leases have been granted to oil companies in the Ft. Norman area, how many wells have been drilled, and whether there is any production in 1942, and whether there is any hope of constructing a pipeline or highway to the locality. Maybe there would be no danger in establishing in the area of Ft. Norman, but it is the kind that newspapers are warned not to print. Can't enemy agents read Hansard?

Resolution Re-Affirms Stand on Debt Conference

Complete endorsement of a resolution passed at the Inter-Provincial Debt Conference, in June, 1942, at Saskatoon, was given at a debt adjustment meeting in the legislative buildings Monday.

Promoted

The resolution calls for Dominion government action to:

- 1—Write down the principal of farm debts, secured and unsecured;
- 2—Reduce the interest rate on farm debts, secured and unsecured;
- 3—After terms of payment of farm debts.

4—Extend to any person the protection of the above legislation, if such action is necessary;

5—Proceeding against any person on debts or securities after adjudication has been made.

6—Make the foregoing proposals apply to any farm debt, regardless of the time they were incurred.

The resolution points out that provincial legislation covering the seven points was found by the courts to be ultra vires, and that the result is a valuable income to the farmers of the province of which it is not possible to forecast.

PO. Clifford B. Killip, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Killip of 1128 94 street who was recently promoted from the rank of Flt. Sgt. along with P.O. Bruce R. Harper, son of Mrs. W. A. Harper of 1192 94 street.

Premier William Aberhart Urges Obtaining Maximum Education

Acquiring of a liberal education, and the taking advantage to the greatest possible extent of educational facilities offered, was urged by Premier William Aberhart, in addressing the H.V.C. club at a banquet at the Coronation hotel Saturday night. The banquet was held in connection with the organization's conference which had commenced Friday.

Mr. Aberhart said that it was essential for all students to remember that after the war they would be the persons who the shortage of jobs would affect.

All returning members of the armed forces would necessarily have to be provided for first, therefore it was up to the teenage boy to make himself as prepared as possible for this time. He finished by saying that he advised all young men to do some serious thinking once every little while, and he asked them to put their own responsibilities concerning post-war conditions.

One good question that a person could put was that of the possibility of another depression after the war. Then it would be possible to find out what causes a depression, and from that a remedy could possibly be found more easily.

Other Speakers

Other speakers were Mrs. R. T. Rose and R. S. Shepherd. Mr. Shepherd told what he expected of education with the war on. He said that he expected that the war would be a great help to the young people of the country, and that it would be a great help to the young people of the country, and that it would be a great help to the young people of the country.

Mr. Rose told of the progress of the war, and he emphasized the fact that the opening of the north was a great help to the young people of the country, and that it would be a great help to the young people of the country.

Pay Increases Are Reflected In Insurance

Pay roll increases in Canada are reflected in the amount of insurance being purchased, particularly by Canadians in the lower income brackets. D. E. Kilgour, vice-president and general manager of the North American Life Assurance Co., said in an interview here at the weekend.

He is on a tour of Western Canada and is accompanied by E. H. Hunter, superintendent of agencies. During their stay here they conferred with Mr. E. Kilgour, vice-president and general manager of the North American Life Assurance Co., said in an interview here at the weekend.

He said that during wartime people seemed to be more conscious of the serious threat to life, and turned to life insurance. In the first Great War he pointed out, life insurance sales fell off during the first year, but there were increases of 100 per cent in the fourth year of the war.

Mr. Kilgour said that life insurance was probably more insurance-minded than ever before. He said there were two reasons, one psychological, the other the increased payrolls attending the war.

Edmonton Fliers Land in Britain, Eager for Action

CONFIDENT, Feb. 15.—(CP)—Adventure-bent airmen and soldiers to bolster Canada's armed striking force in Britain sailed from here recently, and their safe arrival in Britain was announced last night.

Confident of getting in action within a short time were the airmen recent graduates of the Commonwealth air training plan who a year ago were ground-bound college and office men.

A former clerk, P.O. C. D. Gordon, was among the airmen.

PO. G. T. Caine, also of Edmonton, is a fighter pilot now but at heart he is still a "darned good fur rancher."

It's 19 to one bet that no matter how many Germans he shoots down, he won't get as big a thrill as he does out of raising platinum mink. Caine claims these were first raised in Canada on his ranch, and he added: "We still raise the best even yet."

He said a coat made of that kind of fur would cost, "around $37,000."

Mountain of Flour Under Construction

Building the Pyramids—1943 A.D. and 1943 B.C.

Sullen Smokers

Even the gift of American cigarettes fails to bring smiles to the faces of these captured Japanese airmen, pictured at a U.S. South Pacific base after being removed from the Guadalcanal area.

Flair For Drama

Geraldine Fitzgerald is the auburn-haired beauty whose flair for drama has made her the Emerald Isle's loveliest gift to the silver screen. Her eyes are green, she loves dark colors, prefers to wear black, is partial to dark make-up, and is emotional and often moody—hence she feels that she must have a "brunette personality." Miss Fitzgerald speaks with a Dublin accent and Dubliners pride themselves on speaking the purest English in the world. She loves music, plays the piano, and takes pleasure in singing the old folk songs of Ireland. Painting is her hobby. She is also an avid collector of old ship models. Riding is the only outdoor sport she enjoys, and she is fortunate in having the kind of a figure that needs no slenderizing. She is five feet three and one-half inches tall and weighs one hundred and twelve pounds. She is featured in Warners' "Watch on the Rhine."

Rescued—With Injuries

Because the quick-thinking, quick-acting motorman was able to stop his car before wheels touched her, Marie Davis, of Washington, escaped with minor injuries from the accident pictured above. She is shown as she lay pinned under the street car while rescue squads worked 25 minutes to release her. Taken to the hospital, she was released the next day.

Get It, Nazis?

Smiling broadly, a British Tommy obeys that impulse and makes victory sign as he takes pair of captive Nazis to prison camp in Egypt.

In the land of the pyramids, native women and other workers build a mountain of flour bags, left, in manner reminiscent of the days of the Pharaohs. The flour from Australia, will feed United Nations fighters. Egypt's pyramids, right, built from 3000-1800 B.C., were probably under construction in 1943 B.C.

GREMLINS?

Just what causes the vapor trails of these 10 American Flying Fortresses over England air experts can't decide, but pilots blame it on the Gremlins. The B-17's have blasted U-boat bases and other Nazi installations in occupied France with daylight raids of ever-increasing fury.

The Red Cross 80 Years Old

Observing the 80th anniversary of its founding in Geneva, the International Red Cross is on Feb. 9 going through one of its most active periods of service. The smiling Red Cross nurse and her associates help in hospitals, give aid and relief in time of fire, flood or disaster, teach first aid, maintain contact with war prisoners and give scores of other services, including the vital work of collecting blood plasma. The pictures show how blood from a Canadian donor goes into bottles and packages, then is carried to distant war fronts to be used in saving the lives of soldiers in the field or sailors in ships' hospitals.

"You may think this is a funny picture, what with me staring dejectedly at that horse meat sign, but the only thing I like about it is the part that says 'beef, lamb, veal and pork also available.' This is the first and only store here in Washington, D.C., to sell us horses for public consumption. But down at the stable, the word is going around that it is happening all over the country. I'm old, tough, and sitting—there's probably no taste in my meat at all. You wouldn't want to eat me—hm-m-m-m!"

Aussies Fight Japs

Calm clouds and sun swept hills give no hint of the deadly business of these Australians on Jap-occupied Timor, Dutch-Portuguese island 400 miles northwest of Australia. Here Aussie guerillas have been snatching at Jap positions, destroying enemy installations and keep the foe from launching a flank attack from this important island. Signal Corps soldiers, top, maintain contact with the mainland on their short-wave radio. Pair of Aussies, below, dash through a native village after setting it afire to keep the Japs from using it as an airbase.

Cleaning Up In Tunisia

Handy horse trough somewhere in Tunisia makes a wash basin for British paratrooper cleaning some of that embattled country's mud off his boots.

Cap-and-Gowners

Six-year-old Sisto Delicate, voted "most likely to succeed" by his kindergarten class in New York City, delivers valedictory address to his fellow graduates.

Qualifying for citizenship papers, Russian-born film actress, Linda Brent, now proudly calls the American flag her own.

No Pipe Dream

Cuban inventor converted to coal and says this stove will run his car 100 miles for 15 cents. But what about tires?

Favorite between assignments relaxation of film actress Dorothy Morris is a plunge in one of Hollywood's many pools.
